

BRIEFING ROOM

U.S.- Mexico High-Level Economic Dialogue

SEPTEMBER 03, 2021 • STATEMENTS AND RELEASES

On September 9, the Biden-Harris Administration will convene the first U.S.- Mexico High-Level Economic Dialogue (HLED) since 2016 in recognition of the broad, deep economic agenda that the United States shares with Mexico. Established in 2013, the HLED advances strategic economic and commercial priorities for both countries, with the shared goal of fostering economic development and growth, job creation, global competitiveness, and reduction of poverty and inequality. This year's Dialogue will focus on four central pillars: Building Back Together; Promoting Sustainable Economic and Social Development in Southern Mexico and Central America; Securing the Tools for Future Prosperity; and Investing in Our People. The HLED complements and reinforces the full range of issues of importance to the bilateral relationship, including recovering from the COVID-19 pandemic, building climate resilience, addressing the root causes of migration, and cooperating on security.
